UNC Investment Fund FY 2010 Performance Review

- For the 12 months ended June 30, 2010 (FY 2010) the UNC Investment Fund produced a +6.8% return
- On the one hand, this positive return represents a step in the right direction after the significant loss recorded in the prior fiscal year
- On the other hand, the Fund's FY 2010 return was quite disappointing on a relative basis:
 - The Fund's return lagged the return on the Strategic Investment Policy Portfolio (SIPP) benchmark by a sizable margin for the year
 - The Fund's return ranked in the bottom quartile of university endowment returns for the year

Primary Factors For Relative Underperformance to Strategic Investment Policy Portfolio

- Real Estate writedowns
- Long/Short Equity managers too bearish in strong equity market environment
- Domestic Fixed Income short duration and overweight high quality

Long-Term Performance

Periods ended June 30, 2010

Summary

- The UNC Investment Fund's FY 2010's results were disappointing as the Fund performed poorly relative to its SIPP benchmark and compared to other institutional funds for the year
- The UNC Investment Fund's longer-term record is still attractive relative to benchmarks and peers
- FY 2010 represented a small step forward in repairing the damage incurred in FY 2009 – recouping the losses incurred in FY 2009 will likely be a multi-year process requiring patience and discipline
- FY 2011 performance is off to a good start
- Looking forward, we remain confident that the UNC Investment Fund will continue to produce attractive longer-term returns, particularly on a risk adjusted basis
