An Introductory Discussion of the Carolina North Plan

Background Information for a Discussion among Members of Chapel Hill Town Council and
Members of the UNC-Chapel Hill Board of Trustees Buildings and Grounds
Committee and University Administration

January 13, 2008

I. Introduction

On Sunday, January 13, members of the Chapel Hill Town Council, members of the Buildings and Grounds Committee of the UNC-Chapel Hill Board of Trustees, and Good Neighbor Initiative

Hi Linda,

I don't know if you are the mastermind behind the “Good Neighbor Initiative,” but I just wanted to say thank you to whoever is behind this effort. I think the materials distributed this week are terrific – they set just the right tone. As you may recall, we live on Vance Street – directly across from a perennial “party house.” It's nice to have the university lay the groundwork for future “conversations” with our new neighbors.

Dear Friends and Neighbors,

After a quiet week, campus is hopping. It seems like every other person has a Carolina blue gown on and is headed to the Old Well for picture-taking. Commencement is Sunday morning at 9:30 a.m. but the whole weekend is full of school and departmental ceremonies including the doctoral hooding ceremony tomorrow, Saturday, at 10 a.m. in the Smith Center. The registrar expects that 5,683 students will graduate Sunday: 3,511 with bachelor’s, 1,247 master’s, 258 doctoral and 667 professional degrees. Michael R. Bloomberg, New York City mayor, will give the Commencement address. Remember that you are welcome to attend – no tickets are necessary.

The academic life of campus gears up again on Tuesday, May 15, with the start of the first summer session and Maymester, the three week program offering 42 courses for 3 credit hours each.

Steam tunnel update. This will be a two-week report as I will be away next Friday. This week’s rain delayed the paving of the western lane of Pittsboro Street until next week. If the good weather holds, the sidewalk should be finished also. That will allow the traffic to shift west and work to begin on the eastern lane. Completion of the eastern lane is expected to take only one month and the opening of two lanes of traffic Pittsboro Street scheduled for mid-late June.

The rain wasn’t as disruptive of the work near the Carolina Inn where most of the work is happening...
